The Center for Active Learning & Library Instruction (CALLI, H-04-015) is the campus classroom dedicated to group instructional sessions involving library research, information literacy skill building, and assessment, including the development of critical thinking skills and instruction on the ethical use of information. The CALLI is also an instructional facility and sandbox for library resources, including electronic databases, open access materials, Curriculum Resource Collection materials, archival materials, and library teaching and learning programs by faculty instructional librarians and archivists of the University Libraries. It’s not available for uses outside the Library’s instructional and service programs.

The CALLI is not available for reservation through 25Live (R25). All library instruction requests are to be emailed to library.reference@umb.edu
