University of Massachusetts Boston junior Lydia Grasso wants to be a global difference maker, and we’re helping her realize that dream. Lydia spent last summer in Cambodia, working with victims of sexual slavery, and plans to pursue a career in human rights after graduation.

UMass Boston supports Lydia and students like her through scholarships, grants, and international learning opportunities, opening the doors to a lifetime of achievement. Our Just Imagine campaign is raising $100 million to support the university’s next era, with a focus on the success of our students.

Help us train the young leaders of tomorrow working to ensure that all members of our global community are treated with dignity and respect.

Just imagine what your gift can do.
