

Question	Melnyczuk	Shpancer	Dillard	Mazzoni
How are we and our people defined by what we remember and forget?
What is memory and how does it work?
What is identity and how does one come to have an identity?
How does having “people” influence one’s identity?
How does what I remember define me?
How does what I forget define me?
How does what my people remember define me?
How does what my people forget define me?

Grid notes give you an index to the reading set, so you can easily find and link relevant materials. After you have read and marked up the reading set, enter the page numbers of sections that can help you to answer the question in the left hand column. When you’ve finished, each row will give you source materials relevant to the question in the far left column.

Grid notes are not an outline, but they can help you to compose a methodical argument.